Test document

This document is intended to test the quality of PDFs produced from Word. It simply includes as many of the styles and elements as I usually use.

Main heading

Some more text.

Lists

Get ready for some other elements, firstly a list created with the bullets button:

- List item 1
- List item 2
  - Sub item 1
- List item 3

A numbered list, from the numbering button:

1. Numbered item 1
2. Numbered item 2
   a. Sub item 1 (using tab)
3. Numbered item 3

Trying the new multi-level list button:

1) Item one.
2) Item two.
   a) Sub item (using tab)
3) Item three.

Table

Coffee and tea consumption per day:

Name	Cups of coffee	Cups of herbal tea
Designer	0	4
Techie	3	1

Table 1: Caption for table, coffee and tea consumption.

Only configuration of the table was to select the 'repeat as header row at top of each page' option in table properties.

Columns

Just testing to see how columns are dealt with. This is not part of the columns, but we'll see how it copes.

Column one, just need to see how much text it takes to get to the other column. The section break functionality seems much nicer than it used to be, you can add in breaks within pages, as well as between pages.

This is column 2, after selecting a column break.

This text is after the columns, to check obviously I have to write enough to fill the width of the page.

That's all I could remember off hand. Simply makes the text italics as far as I can tell.
